this winter to render the town free from infection. Neighboring towns and States having published expressions regarding the result of receiving bedding and cottling from Brunswick for months to come, the menace Brunswick will be to her own people and other places, and the anxiety rigorous measures to be taken. The task will probably proceed in this manner: rigorous measures to be taken. The task will probably proceed in this manner:

Commencing in the northern end of the city as soon as the epidemic ends, street after street, and house after house will be taken in rotation. Walls, bedding, carpets, and the entire premises will be disinfected with bi-chloride of mercury and a solution of earboile acid. All clothing will be well aired in a freezing atmosphere. Carpets will not be taken from the floor, but will be sprinkled as they lie. No damage will be done to property, but the process will be thorough. All neighboring precincts where people have gone from Brunswick will be treated in like manner, and the government feels certain that yellow-fever will not crop out next summer.

The second story ran to the effect that the Presiden: reiterated his intention to disapprove any bill which did not provide for the immediate and unconditional repeal of the Sherman law. Between these two extremes the gossips indulged in a wide diversity of statements to suit their individual tastes and wishes. None of the Cabinet when directly approached would say anything for publication as to what had occurred.

CHARGE OF CLASS LEGISLATION. CHARGE OF CLASS LEGISLATION.

In concluding the debate against the resolution, Mr. Dingley charged that it was a distinct instance of class legislation, and in favor of the foreign importer as against the native importer.

An amendment was adopted restricting the benefits of the resolution to goods An amendment was another the benefits of the resolution to goods sold subsequent to its taking effect; also, one extending its provisions to the Callfornia Mid-Winter Exposition. The committee then rose, the joint resolution was reported to the House, and passed.

The pending amendment to give new members of Congress sets of the "Records of the Rebellion" was agreed to. Mr. Beitzhoover (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, moved an amendment, requiring that all printing for the executive departments be done under contract by private establishments. He asserted that experience had demonstrated that if this policy were pursued, printing of this class, amounting to $150,000 in the last fiscal year, could be done for 50 per cent. Of its present cost to the government.

Pending debate, the committee rose, and at 450 the House adjourned until tomorrow at 12 o'clock.
